BACKGROUND

---

Since returning to Asia from New York, I've acted in and directed commercials, movies, and corporate videos. I also coach business executives in interview skills, voice and public speaking workshops. Since 2014, I've been a business role player and facilitator in a wide variety of corporate training workshops for major multinationals. What fascinates me is the similarity between my theatre training and business development; for example using the way you present yourself, speak and verbalize information to create an authentic connection.

A BIT ABOUT ME

I'm a business role player and facilitator with a background in coaching and theatre. I've been involved in various programs such as leadership development, executive presence, influencing skills, team building, diversity and inclusion, unconscious bias, sales, and one-on-one coaching.

MY VALUES

---

My values in life are really focused on family and people. In particular when it comes to learning and development I believe in encouragement and enabling success. If people have a safe space to learn, where what they say and feel is valued, then it's possible to facilitate truly meaningful discussions and learning.
