

TIM CHANTLER

LEARNING CONSULTANT

A BIT ABOUT ME

I am an interactive and energetic facilitator that believes in the importance of using authentic practice to embed impactful learning. I have worked with diverse, multicultural teams at all levels of organisations and strive to ensure positive, engaging and memorable development experiences which support individual, team or organisational enhancement as well as emotional well-being.

MY VALUES

I am passionate about developing people within people-focused organisations and the systems, processes and learning that support effective culture change. I believe every individual is capable of maximising their potential by being inspired to grow through learner-centric activity.

BACKGROUND

---

A qualified teacher and teacher trainer, I moved into organisation design and workforce development after moving to Hong Kong in 2012. Working for the British Council, I designed and facilitated workshops and conferences, as well as managed large-scale global projects across East Asia as the organisation looked to redefine its practice and culture. Within this I worked with many functions in order to facilitate new ways of working and to promote better teamwork and communication, ensuring both efficiency and effectiveness.

After leaving British Council, I worked for Rock the Boat consulting as Executive Development Director, allowing me to organise, design and facilitate coaching and development programmes within many large, global organisations.
